Steve is a co-owner of Pivot Manufacturing and has been the President and CEO since the company's inception in 2000. Pivot has grown from a 3-person machine shop to a company that does machining and assembly work for a variety of industries including defense, aerospace, semiconductor, and alternative energy. Pivot looks to grow significantly during their second decade of operation by leveraging the relationships and the reputation the company has built into new manufacturing opportunities.

In addition to sales and financial duties at Pivot, Steve is also involved in promoting the small business community and the manufacturing industry in Arizona. He currently serves as Chair of the Arizona Chamber, Past Chair and current board member off the Arizona Manufacturers Council, board member of the Arizona Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, board member of Arizona Commerce Authority, and a board member of RevAZ.

A native Arizonan, Steve and his wife Carrie make their home in Central Phoenix with their three boys who attend Creighton University, Brophy College Prep, and Valley Lutheran High School. He has been involved with his sons as a coach in Pop Warner Football, Little League baseball, and rec league basketball. An avid yet exceptionally slow runner, please try not to hit him if you see him running down Central Avenue.

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Steve is also involved in promoting the small business community and the manufacturing industry. Steve has worked with various congressmen and participated in small business roundtables in order to find ways to encourage small business utilization. He has also worked with staff from the Senate Committee on Small Business and the Minority Business Development Agency in Washington DC on issues ranging from cost of healthcare to contract bundling. As part of his involvement with these various groups, Steve works with elected officials at both the federal and state level to increase the visibility of manufacturing in Arizona and to garner support for the industry at all levels of government.

EDUCATION AND AWARDS

Steve earned both his BS and his MBA from Arizona State University.
